Jon –

I guess it takes a while for the formally adopted rules to be “published” on line but the Air Quality Board adopted them on 1/3/18 and they become effective 3/2/18. Attached is the Board Packet that UDAQ used with their Air Quality Board. It covers other rulemaking as well but you can find the following gin there:

- P. 8-11 ... Final Adoption Memo for the oil & gas rules (including registration and emission inventory input requirements and the R307 504-510 rules) from UDAQ to the Air Quality Board – where they describe the minor changes between the proposed version and this final version
- P. 12-39 ... the Responses to Comments for the oil & gas rules
- P. 61-75 ... the language of the final rule for R307-504-510 showing the markup between proposed and final.

Note – Under the applicability for the LDAR – it’s at wellsites (as defined by NSPS OOOOa) AND that are required to control emissions of tank and/or dehydrators on site (i.e. so not all wellsites).

23  R307-509-3.  Applicability.
24      (1)  R307-509 applies to each fugitive emissions component at
25  a well site as defined in 40 CFR 60.5430a, Subpart OOOOa,
26  Standards of Performance for Crude Oil and Natural Gas Production,
27  Transmission and Distribution and is required to control emissions
28  in accordance with R307-506 and R307-507.
29      (a)  A source meeting the requirements of 40 CFR 60.5397a is 30  meeting the requirements of this rule.
31      (b)  Sources subject to R307-509, are subject until the well
32  is shut in.
33      ([a]c) R307-509 does not apply to a fugitive emissions
34  component that is subject to an approval order issued under R307-
35  401-8.

Subject: Utah Permit by Rule

Hi Cindy,

I had a question about the Utah Permit by Rule. I looked at their website, but I'm not seeing the requirements for fugitives emissions monitoring (r307-509). Link below:

<https://rules.utah.gov/publicat/code/r307/r307.htm>

Have they gone into effect? If so, when was the date?

Thanks so much,
Jonathan
